Company name or logo on cars with yellow plates

As part of the fight against extensive organized undeclared work, cars with yellow license plates must bear a visible company name or logo and CVR (company registration) number.

The regulations

There is a number of regulations that have to be followed in order to avoid fines:

- The cars must be equipped with the company's name or logo and CVR number
- Foreign goods vehicles must show proof of their registration in the RUT register on their windshield

The regulations apply to all cars with yellow license plates with a total weight of up to 4 tonnes. This requirement came into force on 1st January 2013.

Where should the information be displayed on the car?

- The information should be displayed on both the right and left sides of the car

- The information must be visible, legible and in a colour that clearly differs from the colour of the car
- The company name and CVR number should be displayed in a way so that they are separate and there is no confusion between the two
- The information may not be shown on signs that can be taken on and off
- For example, the signs may be secured with self-adhesive plastic film

What letter size do I need to use?

- Letters and numbers must be at least 3 cm high. This applies both for your company name and CVR number
- However, if your vehicle is over 3.5 tonnes, your company's name must be written with letters 10 cm high. The CVR number must also be written with numbers at least 3 cm high

You can write the CVR number in two ways

On the same line: CVR 12345678

Or in two lines, with CVR at the top:

CVR

12345678

Company logo as an alternative to business name

If your company logo uniquely identifies your company, you are allowed to use the logo instead of the company name. This may be the case, for example, if your company name is included in the logo.
